

Botanical Name: Brugmansia candida (Datura candida)

Common Name: Angel's trumpet

Type of Plant: dicot; shrub Character evergreen

Habit of Growth:

Overall Shape irregular, upright, rank growing plant, often treelike with a loose, open habit

Height 10-15' Spread 8-10' Growth Rate rapid

Environment:

Exposure outdoors sun to shade -- needs protection from wind

Soil prefers a fairly moist soil

Hardiness tender (zones 16-24)

Morphology:

Leaves ovate to oblong-elliptic coarsely dentate pubescent on upper and lower surfaces

Flowers large, 10" long trumpet shaped flowers, 6" wide, single or double petaled, white or orange

Fruit large, fleshy berry

Propagation: softwood cuttings, taken in warm season

Usage: large scale tropical interest plant, used in containers, for flower production; choice tropical accent plant during warm months

Landscape Care:

Watering needs ample watering; not drought tolerant

Fertilizing balanced fertilizer in spring

Pruning prune hard each year; thin out, head back in early spring

Pests/Diseases caterpillars, aphids, mites, whitefly, cucumber beetles

Special Conditions flowers and fruit are poisonous

Origin: Peru Family: Solanaceae